

Dante Alvarez, Ed.D., Consultant
National Center for Executive Leadership and School Board Development

Areas of Expertise

Human Resources | Collective Bargaining | Employee Discipline
Site Leadership | Organization Structure | Advisor/Coach

Dr. Dante Alvarez is a recognized leader and consultant for the National Center for Executive Leadership and School Board Development. Dr. Alvarez has served in public education for 23 years as a teacher, vice principal, principal, and Director of Human Resources. Currently, Dr. Alvarez oversees Human Resources, Payroll, Risk Management, Induction, Nutrition Education, and Transportation. Dr. Alvarez has been an adjunct professor at Brandman University and the University of the Pacific for both master's and doctorate students

Dr. Alvarez's passion is Human Resources Development. He has developed strategic personnel plans to hire diverse qualified employees for large districts. He has presented on evaluations, investigations, hiring practices, and negotiations. His partnership with the University of the Pacific on teacher preparation programs has led to establishing highly-qualified resident student teachers for the workforce. He has consulted for districts in the organizational structure of the Human Resources Department.

Dr. Alvarez earned his Bachelor's Degree from San Francisco State University, his Master's Degree from California State University, Stanislaus, and his Doctorate Degree from the University of the Pacific. Dr. Alvarez provides expertise and guidance in human resources. His experience in human resources, operation development, induction, and training, have established him to successfully lead other districts in developing a strategic organizational structure.